TEXAS SPRING PALACE.

The Committee of Fifty Meets and Takes Steps to Organize.

The Plan of the Organization Agreed Upon, Chairman Sommerville Appoints the Committee of Ten-Proceedings.

It was but a few minutes after 4 o'clock yesterday when thirty-six members of the committee of fifty appointed at the meeting of night before last to take in hand the Texas Spring palace project, were in Huffman's hall, and Chairman Sommerville at once called the meeting to order. He stated that he had conversed with most of the committee, and all had favored the plan as a good thing for Texas.

Gen. Cameron was called on and spoke briefly, setting forth the plan of the palace, the cost, dimensions, etc.

A resolution was adopted unanimously, that this meeting take immediate steps to organize at Texas Spring palace company. Col. Wynne, W. L. Malone, W. A. Huffman, W. F. Sommerville, S.O. Moodie, Max Elser, W. G. Veal and others made brief addresses, all favoring

A committee consisting of Maj. K. M VanZandt, Col. R. M. Wynne and W. A. Huffman was appointed to report on plan of organization, and reported the following form, which was adopted by a

Its object shall be to secure grounds and erect a palace thereon for the exhibition of all the agricultural, horticultural, mineral and other products of the state of Texas. Its authorized capital stock shall be $100,000, divided into 10,000 shares of $10 each, which, when issued, shall be full paid, and not subject to any assessment.

Said company shall organize when $25,000 of stock shall have been subscribed; provided, all stockholders shall be notified of the time and place of organization, and provided, further, that at least 10 per cent, of the amount subscribed shall be paid before the stock is voted.

We, the undersigned, agree to take stock in said company and will pay for the amount of stock set opposite our respective names, 10 per cent. to be paid the day of organization and the remainder to be paid in such installments as the directors of said company shall require; provided that not more than 25 per cent.

On motion of Col. Wynne the chair was empowered to appoint a committee of ten to solicit subscriptions to the stock, said committee to report to a meeting of the general committee and all citizens at Huffman's hall on Tuesday afternoon next at 4 p. m.

It was decided that $50,000 of stock should be taken by that time and all members of the committee pledged themselves to work and interest others in the work.

On motion Chairman Sommerville was authorized to increase the general committee to 100 by the addition of fifty other citizens as soon as possible. The meeting then adjourned until

MEG, NOT MERRILIES.

How Janauschek Transforms Herself and Be comes the Living, Breathing Reality of Scott's Gipsy. New York Tribune.

Mme. Janauschek may be said to be the last of the greath Gothic geniuses of a rapidly closing era of the drama. Her career in this country, entered upon when she had gathered the most enduring laurels of histrionism in Europe, has been both an arduous and an honorable one. She has held the legitimate drama up when all the rest of her contemporaries were running to French hysterics or blood-and-thunder. English Her Macbeth is the grandest Lady of the decade. Her Brunhilde is alone, in our reccollection, the most massive, the most archaic, the most heroic of the mythical heroines. Her Elizabeth outranked Ristori's, and was wrought of finer metal. And in such memorable impersonations as Phedre and of the inclosure. From the position in Medea she combined the massive strength of the German school with the finesse and delicacy of the French. Mme. Janauschek has taken some allowable liberties with the old play of "Guy Mannering." These changes are judicious and in keeping with the progress of good taste. She plays the piece in four acts instead of three, as formerly done, and in the last effective situation.

To the few scenes given to Meg Merrilies she imparted a terrible force and an acute pathos. In the element of volcanic passion it is a complementary picture to Salvini's Othello, and in simple elemental directness of method is superior to the ghastly and terrible silhouette that Cushman drew. In the scene in which she fondles the Laird Ellangowan and recalls his infancy she suffused the text with a tenderness that was foreign to Cushman's art, and that has never before, to our knowledge, been given to it. It is a curious tribute to say that a large and intelligent audience were affected to tears under the actress' spell in this old and familiar situation, where the whole effect must depend absolutely upon the artist's art. unaided by an advantage of person, or dress, or circumstance.

In the scene where the hag swears to restore the house of Ellangowan, Mme. Januaschek reached a point of gennine dramatic fervor that was electrical; and in the death scene, one of the most thrilling that has been put upon the stage, she held her audience breathless. stock of furniture, etc., at their old | We have had a variety of stage demises, but this one for poignant, sustained intensity, is unique.

The most remarkable feature of this performance is the art of the supernatural which the actress preserves about the crone. Her Meg Merrilies is a very notable example of the power of a consummate artist to get out of herself into the character she assumes. She is transformed by the part while she is transforming it. She manages, as every great artist does to prevent us from lingering on the methods and lands us at the result. We become acquainted with Meg Merrilies, and Janauschek passes out of mind.

Temporary Loss of Reason Nearly Costs a Life, A Well Known Galveston Printer Found Dead in His Bed.

Special to the Gazette. GALVESTON, TEX., Jan. 17 .- A sensational shooting occurred this morning in the ship chandlery of H. Marwitz & Co., corner Twenty-second and Mechanic streets. Louis Waizel, the bookkeeper, for some imaginary wrong stepped from the office and fired four stimes at Capt. Victor Lyle of the British steamship Victoria, but fortnnately without hitting him. Capt. Lyle, when assaulted, was engaged in conversation with Mr. Marwitz and made hasty exit from the store. Waizel was instantly arrested and lodged in jail. Mr. Marwitz, his employer, and a member of his family, all testified that Waizel for the past two weeks has been ill, nervous and at times acted strangely, and attribute his attack on Capt. Lyle to loss of reason. Capt. Lyle does not wish to prosecute Waizel, believing that he did not know what he was doing at the time the assault was made, This is borne out by the fact that Waizel (when Capt. The chief objection to the new charter is the extension of the city limits. A long petition has been secured by the opponents of the new charter, and money was been raised to successfully oppose the passage of the measure.

Experience of a Congressman Who Ran Up Against the Game. A Western congressman told a good story on himself the other night, says the New York Tribune, which illustrates how strong the propensity for indulging in games of chance is in some men. "When went to the Chicago convention in 1884," he said, "I got in with some of you newspaper men and we managed to have several quiet games of draw. One night (it was the last night before the convention adjourned), instead of interviewed at the jail was ignorant of our usual game, we all went around to the fact that he had attempted to shoot | Mike McDonald's place and fought the tiger in the shape of faro. Although I had been moderately successful at poker, fortune seemed to entirely desert me on this occasion, and I left the room a loser to the extent of $85. My expenses in attendance upon the convention had been quite heavy, and I really couldn't afford to lose that much money; in fact, I had and resolved I wouldn't fool with cards

any more. 11

"Did you keep your resolution?" "I did for about a year. After congress adjourned in 1885 I went out home. and in the summer I took a trip to the Pacific coast. I had never been there before, and I had a royal good time. When I started to return I intended to come to Washington, for there were some matters before the departments which I desired to look after. When I reached Chicago, for I came by the northern route, I found I had three hours to wait. I had broken through my resolution by getting into a little game on the cars, and as a consequence I had only $15 in my pocket. When I found that I had three hours on my hands the first thought that came home was the $85 I had left in Mike McDonald's place the year before, and a desire seized me to get it back. I figured that $5 would pay for my sleeper, $5 would pay for my subsistence, and then I had $5 left. Well, I went out and got a drink and then climbed the stairs to the faro bank. I bought $5 worth of chips and sat down to play. There were only two others playing, and, of course, I bet very cautiously. I lost down to $1.50 and "I got another drink, and them came to the conclusion that $1.50 was no good to keep and I went back to the game. I played again and won; and I kept on winning, and finally when the other two stopped and I was left alone with the dealer I cashed in $73. I went down to the depot and found I had still two hours left before the train would start."

"Did you go back and play again!" "No, I didn't. But I was so much afraid that I would be tempted to play again that I didn't dare to leave the depot. So I sat there for these two long hours, hugging the money that I had won, and fearful that it would get away from me. Mike McDonald's place doesn't owe me but $8 now, '' he added in conelusion, "and I'm not going to try to get that back,"
